Cam Hardy: Friday press conference for Dusty Rhodes and Bill Seitz along with many other GOP officials. Not public yet, but it will be a big Republican event.

I talked with Katie Vogel who is ready to start our fundraising campaign. We're going to push this on our own.

I have a list of 25 personal contacts.

Andy: I'll send emails of previous donors.

Celeste: We want to do some sort of celebration after the levy is passed. We might put out some billboards or yard signs to take credit for the successful levy.

Cam: I was connected with the new Enquirer transportation person, Randy Tucker. We're going to talk tomorrow.

Nathan: How many parts of the county are we trying to reach with our canvassing?

Cam: The Republicans are going to reach their parts of the county, so it will be a united effort to reach as many people as possible.

Kevin: Sierra Club is going to ride the 11 on Saturday to push the levy. The Native American Council is also close to endorsing.

Nathan: Green Umbrella and TriState Trails have also endorsed Issue 7. We're trying to make sure we get a seat at the table for the infrastructure integrating committee.

Celeste: The unions would also like to be involved with the infrastructure piece.

Cam: I'm going to Woodlawn's council next week. They're very interested. North College Hill is also trying to get something passed in support of the levy.

Celeste: Town hall on March 9 for Mt Healthy and North College Hill.
